Accountability Office, 2009 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)497040437 Subject: Transportation -- Security measures -- United States. Excerpt: . . . such actions. Balancing the potential economic impacts of security enhancements with the benefits of such measures is a difficult challenge. Securing the nations mass transit and passenger rail systems is a shared Multiple Stakeholders responsibility requiring coordinated action on the part of federal, state, Share Responsibility for and local governments; the private sector; and passengers who ride these Securing Mass Transit and systems. Since the September 11, 2001 attacks, the role of federal agencies Passenger Rail Systems in securing the nations transportation systems has continued to evolve. In th response to the September 11 terrorist attacks, Congress passed the Aviation and Transportation Security Act of 2001, which created TSA within DOT and conferred to the agency broad responsibility for overseeing the security of all modes of transportation, including mass 12 transit and passenger rail. In 2002, Congress passed the Homeland Security Act, which established DHS, transferred TSA from DOT to DHS, and assigned DHS responsibility for protecting the nation from terrorism, 13 including securing the nations transportation systems. Within TSA, the office of Transportation Sector Network Management (TSNM) leads the unified effort to protect and secure the nations intermodal transportation systems, with divisions dedicated to each transportation mode, including mass transit and passenger rail. Within TSAs Office of Security Operations, the Office of Multi-modal Oversight manages the Surface Transportation Security Inspection Program which coordinates with TSNM to develop and implement security programs, including strategies for conducting and implementing assessments and other actions in mass transit and passenger rail. In addition, TSAs Office of Intelligence (TSA.
