Every trade or industrial union is re uired to comply with the legal regulations concerning all corporate bodies. Vhen this is done they are registered by the state and empowered to act in cases of dispute, penalties being imposed on the union, with liability on the individual members, in case of violation of any of the provisions of the act. Without going into details of the law, the plan may be understood from an outline of its leading features. New Zealand is divided into six industrial districts, in each of which is a board of conciliation, composed of four or six members and a chairman. The members are elected by the unions, the employers unions electing half the members, and the workmen s unions the other half. These members choose an impartial person outside of their own number to act as chairman. The...

Reviews

This book is definitely not straightforward to get started on studying but extremely exciting to read. It is really simplistic but shocks in the 50 percent of the ebook. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.
